Another Universal Design
Which Has Been In Demand

The House of Seven has had a number of designs that were popular but never two that were in such immense demand as our numbers 116 and 120. They were created with the idea of giving the average buyer an opportunity to get something of rare beauty and genuine distinction—something that was within the financial reach of the average man.

We believe you will have to admit that No. 120, shown above, meets these requirements and we are confident that it will increase sales for retailers of the country.

There Is Distinction Without Higher Cost In RED PEARL

It might be thought that this granite, because of its type and freedom from blemish or marks, would cost more than others. This is not true, though RED PEARL finds a ready market wherever shown. Our quarries are in fine condition and Red Pearl continues to show rich stocks in every-day cuttings.

A Memorial For
The Careful Buyer

We believe you would find the Crafton design one that would appeal to the most careful buyer. It has all the richness and beauty and contour of the higher priced memorial with features that prevent it going up in cost to manufacture. The curve top with its appearance of continuity, together with well executed sand blast work accounts for its distinction. We invite inquiry.

Leadership That Has Never Been Disputed In Decades

North Star's distinctive traits never have been disputed. For years it has thrown its shafts of light on a tutored granite industry. It has met with instant success wherever shown and its repeats in the same territory, year after year, is a testimonial of its constant, day in and day out, popularity.

In addition to North Star Red we feature several other granites, however, such as Pioneer Dark Gray and, in fact, a variety such as almost any dealer would find ample for his display room—six different granites in all.

We invite your careful consideration of the North Star line.

THE GAME CALLED BUSINESS

The game of business is interesting to the fellow who is absolutely in control of his own destinies. In modern times competition has become so great that we have developed such high-sounding professionals as business councilors, business engineers, and efficiency experts. There has been a great deal of hokum about some of these individuals but out of the maze of ideas and cogitation there has come some pretty well defined rules.

In the past, the first consideration to any business was volume. The average man believed that with volume he could overcome almost any obstacle. An epidemic of price cutting followed and today we find ourselves confronted with a new situation. The price-cutter is upon us and he comes from many directions. The business man who is to be successful, therefore, in these days is the one who, when he comes home at night, knows exactly how much it has cost him to operate his business for that day. By this we do not mean the immediate expense and the money he spent to run his business during that eight, ten, or twelve hours but spreading expense over the entire year and dividing it into units called days.

We once knew a man who did a business of only $150,000.00 per year—not a very big business in comparison with the big business of the country—but he could tell you to the penny what his daily average expense amounted to and he could tell you what volume of business he had to do before he started to make a profit. This man was eminently successful and it was due to the fact that he always knew how much of the money which came into his office belonged to him. He was in control.

Rules of this kind apply particularly to the manufacturing business and we believe that the granite industry, coming under this general category, would do well to develop its own system in taking care of expense. We believe that the average craftsman would be much happier in his chosen vocation if he could tell at the end of each month what his profits amounted to and we believe that the average retailer would get an equal satisfaction out of keeping this kind of life in his business because, after all, there is some truth in the axiom, which applies to the game of business, that to know your business is to enjoy it and if you do not know it you cannot very well get much of a kick out of it.
Monumental Drawing and Lettering

THE LILY IN APPLIED ORNAMENT

In presenting the Easter Lily as a decorative motive in memorial design, we are impressed with the fact that it would be impossible to illustrate a more beautiful, more popular, or more representative flower for this series.

The loveliest flower of the lily family is probably best understood when referred to as Easter Lily, because of its great popularity at this particular season of the year.

This name is more commercial than real however, for its true title is the Madonna Lily, because it was dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

Admitting that the lily is significant of everything pertaining to Easter, there are no particular reasons why we should not refer to it as Easter or Ascension Lily if we choose.

In all probability we would be considered very ignorant if we dared refer to the plant by any other name than Easter Lily, and we do not wish to convey such impressions to the minds of our readers even though they may be justifiable.

We prefer to call it Easter Lily anyway, which again shows an utter lack of everything a real author should possess.

We neglected to mention the "Lady Lily" another name by which this plant is recognized.

Just why this beautiful plant should be known by so many names is not hard to understand if we consider its richness in religious symbolism. And is it surprising why the Easter Lily should be so popular with memorial designers even though we forget for the moment its beauty and the fact that every part of the plant can be nicely arranged in many splendid design schemes.

Symbolic of Purity, Regal Beauty, the Ascension, Easter, the Virgin Mary, what more could we ask for as a decorative motive in expressive memorial design?

The only justifiable criticism in the lily as a memorial decoration is this; the flower is so expressive in religious thought that few of us can ever hope to receive such a tribute from those who know us best. So that none of our readers will be offended at this statement, it may be best to suggest that the author of this series has himself only in mind when this insinuation is made. He feels that the only lily he will receive as a memorial tribute will be in the form of a pick and shovel, symbolic of his destination rather than of his work.

Naturalistic floral decoration is not acceptable in correct design for memorials, and while the modern memorial designer will do his utmost to abide by these fixed rules and laws, still at times he is greatly tempted to lower the bars of restraint, especially when seeking inspiration from the lily.

That these rules are not strictly adhered to is a proven fact. We have in mind several beautiful memorials in some of our finest cemeteries, in which the naturalistic lily was used with pronounced effect, raised in bold relief and carved by skilled artists. "Terrible design", the critic will say, but to those who do not understand, the memorial is and always will be considered a masterpiece.

Our purpose in writing these articles is to convey to the student what knowledge we possess of good practice in design. We do not propose to act as dictators or critics in any sense of the word. If you desire a naturalistic carved lily on your family memorial, none shall harm you if your wishes are carried out in the matter. Your tastes may be criticized by certain self-appointed authorities, but you will exist as before. Personally we would rather have a naturalistic atistically carved lily on our memorial than a crudely outlined group of nude women, referring of course to a certain French example of Mortuary Art which some critics are eulogizing.

All this illustrates that we do not always "practice what we preach", and we will now await the abuse from the high and mighty for our departure and utter lack of respect for certain accepted principles in good design.

We believe the accompanying Plate to be the most interesting of any shown in the series. The Plant and its parts are clearly illustrated in Fig. 1, while fourteen design suggestions based on the lily are offered in Fig. 2.

Sketches A, B, E, F, H, J, K and N will serve as central motives in design, while C, D, G, L and O are arranged for corner decorative schemes. Sketch C is the only naturalistic design shown. Note the smallness of the leaves as compared to the flowers and buds in this example and in the illustrations in Fig. 1.

Sketch M illustrates the Fleur-de-lys—the lily of France which appears on the French arms and flag, and is the emblem of Florence and of French Kings.

It is frequently used as an emblem of the Holy Trinity, the Virgin Mary, and is symbolic of Christ the Light of the World.

The Fleur-de-lys as an ornament is very well known, but its origin is not generally understood. The upper part of the design resembles a lily bud and two leaves, and for this reason and on account of its symbolic representation of the Virgin Mary, some authorities claim it originated from the lily. The best authorities however, agree that the pale, purple Florentine Iris is the original of the Fleur-de-lys.

The ornament is beautiful, symbolic, and adaptable to pleasing arrangement in memorial design.

The three petals of the Fleur-de-lys in the arms of France denote Piety, Justice and Charity.

We have had more real pleasure in writing this article than any we have treated previously. We no doubt will be criticised for some of the statements made, but we trust our readers will be as charitable as possible in their criticisms.

In passing from the sublime to the ridiculous we had no other motive in mind than an occasional desire to forget the serious aspects of our work.

Overhead Expense

By A. A. BALDWIN

Prop. Belleville Marble and Granite Works, Belleville, Kansas

Much has been written about "overhead", that insatiable element which takes the cream and leaves the skim milk of profits.

In the various items charged to the overhead budget, and outstanding in its prominence, is that of Advertising, and the vexing problem of quarrier, manufacturer and dealer in how to wisely invest the amount set aside for that purpose.

This is an era of printed publicity. The popular magazine fairly shouts messages proclaiming the merits of food products, safety razors, tooth pastes, and every known commodity.

The Memorialist, in every branch of the industry feels an urge to follow the crowd, lest he be deemed unimportant in trade activities. If publicity is the element to create demand for a product it should by all means, be employed. If glaring display advertisements will sell automobiles, why not art-craft?

Naturally, the quarrier wants to interest the manufacturer, and in turn the manufacturer has to elicit the good will of the dealer, for the retail dealer has the real point of contact with the consumer and the final disposition of the product. Each has to arrive at a means of attention or publicity.

To venture the assertion that some expensive campaigns of advertising are not repaid the effort might be construed as criticism, however that is not the intention. It is possible that proper survey has not been made, and resulted in a misdirected effort.

A study of the progress of the memorial industry will tend to show that the demand for selected materials, better designs and the other essentials of the present day memorial originated with the retail dealer.

This has been brought out by strictly "trade journals", expert designers and fostered by Associations; not by appeal to the general public. The consumer had absolutely no part in the matter. He bought what was recommended by his dealer in whom he had placed his confidence. This being true, every possible help should be given the dealer to promote his sales, and he should feel the co-operation of his manufacturer is his at all times.

Taking this position, which doubtless will be unpopular with some producers, we must see the necessity of a closer union between the manufacturer and the dealer. If the quarrrier wants a larger output of his stock he should join hands with the manufacturer in establishing the good-will and confidence of the retailer.

This can best be done by delivering the grade and finish specified in the dealer's order; by furnishing brochures and samples to be used in sales' promotion, and the possible loan of cuts for local newspaper advertisements.

To this may be added: assistance in securing proper rating of freight shipments, even if necessary to employ an experienced rate clerk in each granite center. This would in no way usurp the duties of the efficient traffic manager of the Craftsman's Association, but would aid him materially in his work. All complaints, fancied or real should be given consideration, making the dealer feel assured.

Interior View, Belleville Marble and Granite Works, Belleville, Kansas that a personal interest was taken in his welfare. A manufacturer would be surprised to know how much his personality enters into a sales talk in the showroom. If he has produced a consistently dependable quality of work he has lent just so much of weight to influence the purchaser.

If he has advised the dealer to select a particularly pleasing design, he goes that much farther with his "absent" sales argument, making it that much easier for the sale to be consumated.

Along the line of good designs it is well to note that keen foresight and business acumen of the Saint Cloud manufacturers in unanimously promoting appealing and saleable designs for their products.

While the merits of the beautifully colored granites of Minnesota are very evident, if the truth was known much of the prosperity and rapid growth of the district are due to the promotion of suitable designs in which the materials were finished.

The unstinted support the manufacturers are giving Design Hints goes to show, in a measure, this has been realized to be an asset. The cuts displayed in connection with the advertising matter of practically all the worth while firms in the district show a type of the work mostly in demand at the present time, and is a valuable guide to the dealer in medium priced memorials.

Design Hints is eliciting favorable comments of middle west dealers and is becoming a fixture with them because of its exclusive attention to correct ideas of designing.

An added interest would be personal mention of members of the respective firms, and quarry notes.

If some of the bunch would contribute occasionally, these items would be of interest to their acquaintances.

Contributions from manufacturers, or their employees, giving ideas of stock displays, short-cut methods known only to those using them, and articles dealing with mechanical problems which are common to all craftsmen would be of benefit.

If contributed by manufacturers they would be of peculiar interest, and only show that some one is thinking of the fellow who, after all, is the main spoke in the wheel —the retailer.

CORRECTION IN OUR JEWISH ALPHABET PLATE

Our attention has been called to an error in the spelling of the symbol for G as shown in our rendering of the Jewish Alphabet, published in the September number of Design Hints. The correct name of this symbol is GIMEL, not GIMET as shown. Please make necessary corrections in your copy now, thereby avoiding possible misunderstandings in the future.

If there is that in a man's nature which demands the best and will take nothing less, and he does not demoralize this standard by the habit of deterioration in everything he does, he will achieve distinction in some line if he has the persistence and determination to follow his ideal.

But if he is satisfied with the cheap and shoddy, the botched and slovenly, if he is not particular about quality in his work, or in his environment, or personal habits, then he must expect to take second place; to fall into the rear of the procession.
IDEA EXCHANGE

Another knack is furnished for this page by Mr. Jos. C. McCarthy, Elmira, N. Y., that is very original. Mr. McCarthy writes as follows: "I have a "knack" for letting down a heavy die on the base after it has been unboxed that might be too simple to mention, but here goes. Roll die on base and unbox; take out under platform and set die (properly mitered) on 2 inch strips. Place "ice" where strips are taken out and as the ice melts, die is gradually lowered to place. If it is too slow in melting, use a little hot water." As a final touch to this knack he writes, "Ain't that the berries?" We'll say it's one way of interesting a few of the "Shylock" ice merchants in the memorial business.

We have received many requests for a proper method of showing letters in a curve or in a circle. The accompanying Plate illustrates a method of laying out letters in a radius of any size. First draw upper and lower guide lines with the compass in the desired curve and accord-sides of each letter must be parallel to the center line of each letter which as previously stated is directed from the radius point. If, after the letters are blocked in, the draftsman finds it necessary to make some changes in spacing, the

An effort will be made to make the illustrations of such size that they may serve as full size drawings for cutting on small memorials, thereby in a measure, reducing labor costs.

In offering this series to the craft, we are not laboring under the impression that we are starting something wholly original. Many emblems have been printed so often in book form that the average workman can draw common ones without referring to his books. It may have been noticed however, that with few exceptions, the reproductions are so very small certain details are hard to decipher especially when one is not familiar with the emblem or its symbols.

It will be our earnest endeavor to present these emblems in a manner that is practical, artistic and comprehensible. Utmost care will be exercised at all times in the rendering of the various emblems and symbols. It will of course, be impossible to explain the exact meaning of all emblems illustrated for some information is not always available to those who are not members of the secret orders. We will to the best of our ability however, explain the meaning of the symbols, so that the reader will have some sort of an idea as to what the emblem represents.

No time or expense will be spared in securing authentic information regarding any emblem shown in this series. If at any time we are in doubt as to the authenticity of any emblem or its symbols, the matter will be investigated with the proper authorities before a rendering is published in Design Hints.

We hope to have the support of the members of the craft in the way of furnishing us with ideas as to the best emblems to illustrate. We desire this series to be as helpful as other articles shown through the pages of Design Hints and with a little co-operation on the part of the dealers, this may be easily accomplished.

The emblem of the American Legion is illustrated in this article. The American Legion membership list includes only those who were in the Military service of the United States during the World War.

We have no authentic information relative to the designers interpretation of the American Legion emblem. He or she had something in mind, of course, else the emblem would be meaningless and it may be stated right here that no designer could be successful with an inexpressible design.

Having no definite knowledge of the exact interpretation we must read the design by its symbols.

Let us suppose for the moment that we designed this emblem and were called upon to sell the idea to a committee composed of very intelligent men. How would we go about it?

We would first make use of our knowledge of the meaning of symbols as shown in the emblem and leave the study of the beautiful qualities of the design for the final touch.

This design expresses the deeds and ideals of the men who make up the membership of the American Legion in picture better than in mere words. The U. S. button worn by every service man is illustrated in the center of a five pointed star, the symbol of Heavenly Wisdom, Merit and Guidance. A laurel wreath, the symbol of Victory after Strife supports these two symbols and is artistically arranged in the circles symbolic of Eternity, Perfection and Completeness. The idea is complete in the use of the rays of the sun, The “source of life and power.”

A summary of the whole scheme tells us that the American service man by Merit and Divine Guidance won a Victory over Strife and accomplished the task so completely, so perfectly, that by Heavenly Wisdom is decreed the source of Life and Power through all eternity.

The American Legion has proven itself to be the Source of Life in its aid to veterans of the world war and their widows and orphans and the Source of Power, if called upon in any worthy undertaking, the only exceptions being those of a political or sectarian nature.

POOR ON THE TRIGGER

A keen-eyed mountainer led his overgrown son into a country schoolhouse.

“This here boy’s arter learnin’,” he announced. “What’s yer bill o’ fare?”

“Our curriculum, sir,” corrected the schoolmaster, “embraces geography, arithmetic, trigonometry—”

“That’ll do,” interrupted the father, “That’ll do. Load him up well with the triggernometry. He’s the only poor shot in the family.”
OH GEE! MOULDS

AT IT'S FACE VALUE

A newlywed traveling man while away on his first road trip after the "we do" act thought he would be funny and sent her a cheek reading, "one thousand hugs and kisses!"

A week later he received a letter reading, "got your check yesterday and the Ice man cashed it today."

She—"I'm afraid to go down this street; it's too dark.

He—"But, dearest, I'm with you.

She—"That's why I'm afraid.—Cracker.

Doing business without advertising is like winking at a girl in the dark. You know what you are doing but nobody else does.

TRUTH AND NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

James had just been engaged to assist the milkman.

"Now," said his master to him on the first morning, "do you see what I'm doing?"

"Yes, sir," replied James. "You're pouring water in the milk."

"No, I'm not, James," was the answer. You're wrong. I am pouring milk into the water. So if anyone asks you if I put water into the milk, you be sure and tell 'em 'No.' Allus stick to the truth, James, and you'll get on in life. Cheatin' is bad enough, but lyin's awful."

A real good time can't be bought or planned—it just happens.

INTRODUCE US

"I can't bear to have my children kissed by strangers."

"Why don't you give the nursemaid strict instructions to prevent it?"

"Well, you see my girls are over eighteen and they won't pay any attention.

TOO LATE

Noticing a pretty new face in his congregation, the minister was bound to display a cordial interest.

"We are pleased to have you here," he told her politely.

"If you will give me your name and address I shall be happy to call."

"Cut it, doc," retorted the flapper wearily. "I've got a sheik."

A BOLT FROM THE BLUE

Elizabeth—Mother, did you like to flirt when you were a girl?

Mother—I am afraid I did, daughter.

Elizabeth—And were you punished?

Mother—Yes, I married your father.

CAN YOU

Now here's a funny problem
A puzzle you can't beat,
How can a girl hike home ten miles,
And only move two feet?
same method must be employed in finding the correct angle of the sides of any letter changed.

FOR SANDBLAST OPERATORS

Of the many methods employed by sandblast operators for transferring designs to the rubber composition preliminary to cutting out, the following is considered the most satisfactory. Secure a sheet of paper the size of the carved detail. Rub one entire surface of this paper with a good soft crayon, dark, if the composition is light in color, and a light crayon, (yellow preferred) if the composition is dark. Now place the sheet showing the full size drawing of ornament over this crayon sheet, with the crayon surface against the back of the design detail, and with a medium hand pencil trace over the design, being careful that every line is traced. In this way the drawing will be outlined in crayon, and should then be placed on the surface of the stone so the crayon lines will be against the composition. Now by rubbing over the entire detail with the hand the design is transferred to the composition in a surprisingly neat and plain manner.

WE EXTEND OUR SINCERE THANKS

To—
F. E. Lathrop & Son of Robinson, Illinois, for placing Design Hints on their mailing-list to receive the monthly issue of The Lathrop Bulletin. This little advertising medium is very neat in appearance, cleverly arranged, and a credit to its editor, the Firm and the industry. “A monthly sheet for customers and friends.”

To the writer the name F. E. Lathrop & Son recalls many pleasant memories of nearly twenty years ago when as a novice he strived for success on the road. The dealers’ hearty handshake, along with generous words of encouragement meant much in those days as well as today. Men of the road never forget the dealers who, like Fred Lathrop, are never too busy to shake hands, never too grouchy to be gentle, kind and courteous, even tho they cannot favor every salesman with an order.

Without friends there can be no success and Design Hints deems it a signal honor to be included in the list of the friends of F. E. Lathrop & Son. Friends to us twenty years ago, and friends with us today.

To—
Mr. Charles Hayes, Proprietor of the Hayes Monument Company of Chicago, for the copy of a twelve page Memorial Record which is presented as an advertising medium for his Firm.

The cover is of beautiful gray stippled stock while the pages are white with elaborate border lines printed in black. The cover design is very artistic in theme and color. Dark blue is used for the title Memorial Record and dark green for the crossed palms, the symbol of Victory over Sin. The design is complete in the placing of these two features within a silver outlined oval, the whole forming a pleasing composite decorative scheme.

A picture of the entrance to the Holy Sepulchre cemetery is shown on the first page directly opposite the business address of the Firm, which is printed on the inside front cover. Then follow several pages with titles as Relatives, Friends, Fraternal Orders, Affiliations etc. This little Record will be of inestimable value in the future as a handy reference for surviving relatives.

The entire scheme reflects the personality of the man who is considered the Craft's leading exponent in sartorial elegance, and good taste.

SANDY

The latest Scotch story is about the young man who called on the Inn keeper's daughter.

He was asked to stay to dinner after which he invited the girl to a movie, the invitation she declined on account of a brewing storm and the radio furnished the evenings entertainment instead.

He enjoyed himself immensely—there was the homebrew, cigarettes, and a generous size box of candy which was freely offered him.

The storm grew worse and it took very little coaxing to induce him to remain over night.

After breakfast he was profuse in his thanks and admitted he never had a better time in his life.

But the girl was Scotch also and after the young man had exhausted his every effort to show his appreciation she shyly asked, "How about a little money?"

"No, no," he answered, "I wouldn't think of it—no indeed," but seemingly as on after thought he continued, "Of course if you wish, you could buy me a necktie."

THE BRUTE

Wife (enthusiastically): Niagara! The most magnificent sight we've ever set eyes upon! Do you know, Henry, when I look at that I just feel as though I can't say anything at all.

Henry: Well, shut up, then!

Do you remember Lincoln's story about the little steamer with the big whistle?

_Every time they tooted the whistle it blew off so much steam that the boat stopped running._

That's the way with lots of people today. If they would only use their energy to drive the paddle wheel of opportunity instead of eternally blowing the whistle of discontent they would find themselves going up the stream of success so danged fast that the barnacles of failure wouldn't have a chance in the world to hook on to their little craft.

THRIFT

The tightest guy we know is the fellow who, on his honeymoon, sat home with his girl looking at a picture of Niagara Falls while he left the water running in the sink.

SWEET DADDY

"She's false to our club."

"Why so?"

"Well, here we are selling kisses for charity and she's off in the corner bootlegging them."

PASS 'M BACK

An old negro, when brought before the judge, was asked if he were the defendant.

Pointing to his attorney, he said, "Dah de defen'ant. It's the gent'l' man what stole de chickens."
THE THINKER

Not so long ago a neighbor expressed the wish that he might have lived fifty or sixty years ago and still have been possessed of the same education and comparative fund of knowledge he now enjoys.

He pointed out that at that time efforts to succeed met with much less competition because of the large number of illiterate people, and that many of the successes of those days would have been mere mediocore business men had they had the ill fortune to have lived today.

But isn't the day almost here when the man who is capable of thinking and who really exercises that prerogative will have less and less competition? Statistics show that the demand for good books is falling off rapidly, while the demand for trashy literature in the form of books and magazines is increasing at a surprising rate. How many of the folks in the automobiles which throng the highways and byways on every night, Sunday and holiday, are thinking of anything more important than a golf game or where there is a good place to eat?

Because of the natural advancement in the scale of living, higher wages and the benefits derived from the thinkers of the past, are we not too prone to credit present society with too great an intelligence, and are not ability, power of concentration and brains giving way to a not too valuable superficial knowledge reducing the average to such levels as to offer little resistance to the man who knows his work, who reads and who thinks?

History repeats itself and the chances for success offer, we believe, but little more in competition than the times which my neighbor decries.

ANOTHER SHEIK

The young woman traveling with her stern-looking father was evidently not in the best of health. She was decidedly pretty, but her cheeks were pale.

A kind—if inquisitive—passenger sitting opposite leaned forward and addressed the stern parent.

"Your daughter seems very ill," he remarked, sympathetically.

"Yes," replied the father, "It is on affection of the heart."

"Dear me! Aneurism?"

"Oh no! Only a guy named Ramp down at Fetter's.

SKEPTICAL

When some big Prune
The son of a Nut,
Marry a Lemon,
And the Pear
Have a Peach of a daughter,
With Cherry lips,
And the Rose in her cheeks,
How in the Devil
Can you believe in Heredity?

WHO WANTS A HARP?

Stop and let the train go by,
It only takes a minute;
Your car will start right off again
And better still, you're in it.

LOGIC

"Give me a glass of plain soda water without flavor."
"Without what flavor?"
"Oh, I'll take it without vanilla."
"You'll have to take it without chocolate. We ain't got vanilla."

Offside

by

Edw. F. Flynn, Director Public Relations
Great Northern Railroad and Director of Rotary International.

In football, when a player breaks a certain rule, he is "offside." That means that he has done something that is contrary to the rule of the great game of football. His team is immediately penalized for this infraction.

In football, so in business, we should be penalized for "offside" offenses.

There was a time when we could do these "offside" things in business and "get away with it," but today, there are so many business men playing fairly that game of business that they penalize the offside business player just as in football the umpire penalizes for offside plays.

And as in business, so in social life, the man who is "offside" generally accumulates enough opprobrium to amount to penalization.

It is a good thing for all of us that we have rules and regulations in baseball, in business and in social life. It is a good thing that we are penalized for "offside" plays in either of these three activities.

We may think it "smart" to be offside in football, in business or in social life, but, the world soon tires of the fellow who is habitually offside in any one of these three important affairs of life.

To be offside is to be illegal. No one who amounts to anything, wishes to do anything that is illegal, so let's not be offside!—Great Northern Goat.

Queen Marie, of Rumanian royalty, is greeted with acclaim it is because there is something different in Royalty in this country.

Royal granites represent the Royalty of the Memorial Craftsman and those who go out (of the ordinary routine) to welcome them find that they, too, are different—that they stand out in a field that produces few granites in a class with Royal.

Are You Alive to Opportunities!

Last month Grewe introduced a fine new idea in design. The returns on this rare design, while not small, still indicated that many of the dealers were not alive to the opportunities offered with this design. We believe the average dealer, if he sat down for a few minutes, could picture in his mind's eye half a dozen prospects for the one design. That one and the one offered this month are only a few of the new ideas in Grewe's collection. Ask us about it.

Add to this the fact that the Townsend policy of strict dealing with dealers only has been established for three-quarters of a century and the further inducement of a design service belonging exclusively to this company and there is nothing left for the dealer to desire. Our seventy years, and more, in the business have ripened our experience so that we pretty well know what the dealer wants, and during all that 70 years we can say in all truth
