ANTIETAM MEMORIALS

ANTIETAM BATTLEFIELD, located eight miles southeast of Hagerstown, Maryland, near the Potomac River, is where the Confederate forces under Lee and the Union forces under McCellan, fought one of the most bloody and decisive battles of the Civil War.

Today the rolling wheat fields of Antietam form a waving banner around the beautifully kept roads and government reservations which form the National Military Park extending into Sharpsburg. States, North and South alike, ever proud of the unexcelled bravery and sacrifice that was made here in 1862, have placed scores of carved memorials upon the grounds in honor of their heroic sons.

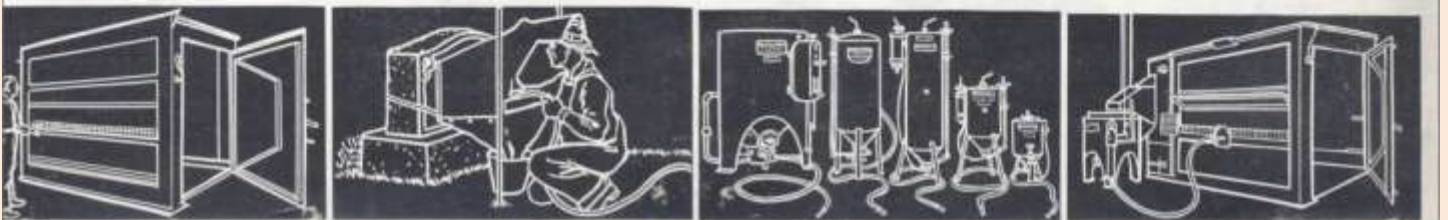

Pangborn invites you to come to Antietam to study the excellence of these distinguished memorials and to admire the beauty of this famous locale. At the same time you are invited to visit our plant and see the modern memorial art blast carving tools and accessories we make. We are attaching an order blank for these items in case you require shipment of equipment or supplies NOW.
